Kaisermutt Translation Notes

Thanks again to Watawheel for the raws.

This marks the end of volume 4, and as you can see from Mangadex's cover volume 5 just came out. We're kind of close to catching up with the volume raws and moving onto the ones on Young Jump, the manga magazine which I'm convinced is fake based on its name. When that happens these extra chapters aren't going to come out at the same rate, and in all honesty there's a good chance I forget to do them.

The "maxed out social meter" is すでに帰りたさMAXハートです (my desire to go home is already at max hearts). I am glad that in English we have a roughly equivalent nerdy way to say you hate talking to people.

Kirari calls Soru an おばあちゃん子 (obaachanko, grandma kid). I'm surprised that this is a commonly existing expression, since I think liking your grandma is the default expectation.

I don't know if the "no men allowed" areas are a thing for stores, I know they do that with subway cars but I don't think malls would be the same dens of vice that trains are.

I bought all five volumes together the other day because I realized that it would vastly reduce the shipping costs. I used to be under the impression that Amazon shipped all ordered items separately, but I guess not.
